

22.03.19

This week we have:

- Written Howard Carter diary entries and used comparative conjunctions.
- Began to look at fractions in maths (these will continue to be our maths focus going in to next term).
- Played games of hand ball in PE with a focus on improving our teamwork.

Thank you to those who have brought in their sponsorship money for the sponsored read, this will hopefully allow us to buy lots of new books.

This week's homework involves mental maths and the spellings are common exception words with the 'l' sound. The deadline for science week homework is next Thursday (28th). All projects will be displayed in the hall for classes to have a look at. I will then put them onto our classroom display.

Please note it the Year 3 class assembly at 2:30pm on Thursday 4th April. We have been preparing some exciting props for it this week and will begin practising next week. We hope to see you there.

See you next week.
